OFFICE Los Angeles

Justin Wong has developed a strong foundation in complex litigation through experience in both the federal judiciary and appellate practice.

His work has given him experience in a wide range of legal issues across multiple industries and areas of law.

Before joining Larson LLP, Justin served as a judicial law clerk to the Honorable Maame Ewusi-Mensah Frimpong of the United States District Court for the Central District of California. In that role, he evaluated a broad range of civil matters involving employment, intellectual property, ERISA, contract, and consumer claims, helping to analyze significant issues before the court.

Justin was previously a fellow at an appellate firm, where he focused on complex appellate issues and emerging developments in California law. His experience researching and analyzing matters involving insurance coverage, evidentiary issues, healthcare, construction, and professional liability disputes gives him a keen understanding of how legal issues are preserved, presented, and reviewed on appeal.
