Andrew Bedigian is a litigation associate at Larson O'Brien. His practice focuses on complex commercial disputes and white-collar criminal defense. Andrew's experience includes defending oil and gas companies and financial institutions against federal and state investigations. He also has significant experience arbitrating domestic and international contract disputes and conducting internal investigations of emerging technology companies, including "fintech" corporations.

Prior to joining Larson O'Brien, Andrew was a litigation associate at an Am Law 20 firm, where he litigated healthcare and product liability disputes. Andrew also worked as a law clerk at Virgin Hyperloop One. There, he gained insight into the employment and regulatory issues confronting emerging technology companies.

Andrew received his law degree from the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA) School of Law and his undergraduate degree from the University of California, Davis. During law school, he was a Managing Editor on the UCLA Law Review, a Writing Advisor in UCLA's Lawyering Skills program, and a judicial extern to the Honorable Stephen V. Wilson of the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California. In college, Andrew played Division I rugby and was a member of several human rights advocacy groups.
