Maria Fotiadis' practice focuses on complex commercial litigation and arbitration in state and federal courts.

Her experience spans a wide range of high-stakes matters, including cross-border disputes and investigations, cybersecurity and data-breach issues, antitrust and consumer-protection claims, and civil rights litigation.

Maria has experience in all phases of litigation, from drafting pleadings and motions to managing discovery and preparing witnesses for deposition and trial. She has appeared at hearings and court conferences, including arguing before the court, and has experience drafting applications for U.S. discovery in aid of foreign proceedings. Her work also includes advising on case strategy, risk assessment, damages analysis, and settlement in multi-jurisdictional disputes involving asset recovery, government investigations, and sanctions-related issues.

Before joining private practice, Maria gained experience as a Legal Extern at the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of California, where she supported federal criminal prosecutions, and through prior roles handling civil rights, criminal defense, and wrongful death matters.
